A way-worn man in Spanish lands, He wanders by the sea; - And by his side a little lad: O Father! why are we so sad? Why don t you speak to me? All day the silent ships go by, The long waves wash the shore. I m weary of the silent ships! The salt waves mock my thirsty lips; - I m weary of their roar! Along the sky the ships go by, But never one comes near. So soft and slow, like ghosts they go! They must be ghosts, or else I know They would not leave us here! I think the ships would pity us, If ships could understand! - Why did we leave our quiet home, In the grand old pleasant town, to roam Like beggars through the land? O, Lisbon was a pleasant town! Till now I never knew How cool and sweet was our fair street, And the window, shaded from the heat, Where the fresh sea-breezes blew! - The window of your little room, Where many a day I stood For hours, and watched you, while you drew The charts which every captain knew, The maps we sold for food. Was it those wondrous maps that put Such dreams into your mind, Of some strange country, far away, Beyond the ocean, which some day You mean to sail and find? Those dreams have made us sad and poor; Your hair has turned to gray; And, sometimes, when you look at me, Your eyes are strange - they seem to see That strange world far away! O Father! I...
