The efforts of the British Govern-ment, seconded by that of Germany, to keep the peace of Europe or at least localize the war, were as com-mendable as they were manifestly sin-cere and to the immediate interest of both. The struggle for the world s carrying trade is not entirely con-fined to Great Britain and Germany, nor the rivalry in building great fleets to defend it. French and Italian and Austrian, even Russian and Japanese, packets ply many a far distant main. Yet separately and combined they are minor rivals. It is to be hoped that if the great ones can emulate each other in peace for mercantile supremacy, they may combine to maintain the unstable equilibrium of the balance of power to which reference has been made. The internal politics...
