He also mentions that many have no faith in the utility of education, and call it a Utopian scheme.⁶⁹ The conservative opposition was particularly strong in the rural districts. Here the close connection between industry and home life was maintained long after it had vanished in the cities. School education is only one form of education. At this early period, school education consisted almost entirely of purely intellectual drill and discipline, and was limited to a very narrow range of subjects. The more modern idea of a broader and richer curriculum was not as yet even dreamed of; and indeed the time was not yet ripe for such a modification in the functions of the school.⁷⁰ The farming population could not see how education was to be of much benefit to their children; at least it was not clear to them that it was worth much sacrifice in the shape of higher taxes. The practical, hard-headed farmer could not see that much book-learning would help their children to earn their daily bread or enable them more easily to pay for a farm. The education they valued was obtained in the school of daily experience, on the farm itself. One of Pennsylvania's historians, in discussing the attitude of the farmers of that state on this subject, reveals the crux of the situation. The main motive which led them to establish schools was not found in their daily occupations. Reading and sewing were...
