Excerpt: . . . to aid his fellow-man; His brave heart to the right was ever true; Faithful to Christ throughout his lifes brief span, He did a lifes work, though his years were few. He bore the Temperance banner far and high; His name among Truths heroes will not die. Swift was the stroke to those who mourn his loss, And dark indeed the cloud around his home: In Gods strength only can they bear this cross, Till Death, the angel, shall to them say Come! Then in the land where all Gods children meet, His smile again their longing eyes shall greet. Oh, what a rapturous greeting on that shore Awaited him whose treasured ones were there I So many who had crossed the sea before, And in whose presence he a heaven could share. We can but mourn our loss: to him twas gain To reach that harbor from the voyage of pain. God make us faithful, een as he was true; And, in the Christ-like pathway that he trod, Help us to walk, till to our raptured view Shall rise the glory of his new abode, --Till by the banks of Lifes fair stream we stand, And greet each other in the better land. 1869. THE TREE. When the late Dr. William A. Alcott, well known as an author and a lecturer on hygiene, was dying at his home in Auburndale, Mass. , he sent as farewell message to his only son, then in...
